COCKTAILS

Whiskey

This spirit is made from a fermented grain mash of corn, tye, oats, wheat or barley. The type of grain used determines the taste and type of the resulting whiskey. The spelling changes with the region from which it comes. The Irish and Americans spell it 'whiskey', whereas the Scots and Canadians follow British spelling, omitting the 'e'

Gin Fizz £6.50
A Double shot of Bombay Sapphire Gin, Fresh Lime, Gomme & Soda

Brandy

There are many tales told about the "invention" of brandy, and its true origin may never be known. Undoubtedly though, it is the French who have refined and perfected the art of making this spirit.

La Bamba £5.50
Martell Brandy, Tia Maria and Chocolate Liqueur with chocolate milk

COCKTAILS

Rum

Christopher Columbus not only discovered the Americas, he also brought sugar cane to the west Indies. This gave all those pirates of yesteryear a darned good base from which to make some liquor.

Vodka

The word comes from the diminutive of the Russian word 'Voka' meaning 'water', making it 'little water'. This spirit, as we know it, was probably concocted in the fourteenth century in Russia. It didn't come to America until the 1930's when the Smirnoff family arrived with their recipe and set up their distillery business.
